

Accreditation Scheme

Brochure and Application Form

July 2005

The New Zealand Recreation Association Accreditation Scheme

Aim

To independently recognize an individual's standard of professional attainment within the recreation profession.

Benefits

The benefits of being accredited are many and varied, with each person will have a different motivation for wanting to go through the accreditation process. Benefits include:

- Employer recognition and support for on-going professional development
- Peer and public recognition
- Ability to add ARPro. (Accredited Recreation Professional) or ARPrac. (Accredited Recreation Practitioner) after your name (e.g. on business cards)
- Certificate and lapel pin (presented at NZRA National Conference)
- Status recorded on NZRA website

Categories

There are two levels of accreditation:

Accredited Recreation Professional (ARPro)

For those working in policy, planning, academic, consulting, and operations management.

Accredited Recreation Practitioner (ARPrac)

For those working in an entry to supervisory level role, usually operational.

Qualifying standards

Applicants must be able to demonstrate:

- Professional commitment
- Relevant experience
- Relevant tertiary qualification
- Professional contribution by way of a graded presentation to peers
- Relevant ongoing professional development

Accredited Recreation Professionals

For people working in policy, planning, research, consulting and/or operations management.

Eligibility

- Professional commitment with two years continual NZRA (or overseas equivalent) membership prior to application date, AND
- Three years full-time equivalent post-qualification work experience in the recreation industry in policy, planning, research, consulting, operations management (or similar) AND
- A nationally approved degree or relevant postgraduate qualification or have significant senior level experience in lieu of a formally recognized academic qualification.

Assessment

- A 20 - 30 minute presentation at an NZRA (or equivalent) conference or regional seminar/conference on a topic related to advancing our understanding of an aspect of recreation, parks or aquatics in New Zealand, AND
- Submit a written document (2,500 – 3,000 words) to the NZRA assessor(s) on the day of presentation that demonstrates a comprehensive understanding about the significance of the topic to the recreation industry.

Ongoing

To remain accredited the person must:

- maintain membership of NZRA and demonstrate continued professional development by successfully completing a relevant tertiary paper OR
- fully participating in a conference or seminar, or equivalent professional development or service once every two years.

Accredited Recreation Practitioners

For people working at the entry to supervisory level, usually operational.

Eligibility

- Professional commitment with two years continual NZRA (or overseas equivalent) membership prior to application date, AND
- Three years full-time equivalent post-qualification work experience in the recreation industry at an entry to supervisory or technical level, AND
- A nationally approved one-year level 4 certificate or diploma related to the recreation industry or having gained significant supervisory or technical responsibility in lieu of a formally recognized academic qualification.

Assessment

- Poster (1m x 2m maximum) presentation using a combination of text (600 words maximum) and images/graphics at an NZRA conference on a topic related to practice in the recreation industry OR
- Present a 20 – 30 minute seminar on a topic related to practice in the recreation industry at a professional development regional workshop AND
- Submit a written document (1,200 – 1,500 words) to the NZRA assessor(s) on the day of presentation that clearly illustrates an understanding about the significance of the topic to the recreation industry.

Ongoing

To remain accredited the person must:

- Maintain membership of NZRA and demonstrate continued professional development by successfully completing a relevant tertiary paper OR
- Attend a conference, seminar or participate in a two day recreation related professional development course once every two years.

Accreditation Board

The National Executive will appoint an NZRA Accreditation Board of six members for a period of two years. Board members will have demonstrated professional credibility and experience in the recreation industry, including one member from the National Executive.

The terms of reference for the Accreditation Board (including full assessment criteria) is available from the Accreditation section of the NZRA website (www.nzrecreation.org.nz).

The Board will grade presentations to set criteria and review applications verified by the NZRA National Office. The Board will confer accreditation to those who have met the qualifying standards.

The Certificate of Accreditation may be presented to successful applicants at the NZRA National Conference Awards, at other appropriate functions, or posted as preferred.

Accreditation is validated every two years conditional on achieving continuing education and membership.

Fees

$200 for the Accredited Recreation Professional initial application and $50 subsequently every two years for validation of continuing education.

$100 for the Accredited Recreation Practitioner initial application and $25 subsequently every two years for validation of continuing education.

Fees are in addition to the NZRA membership fee.
